Mr. Asher Athy

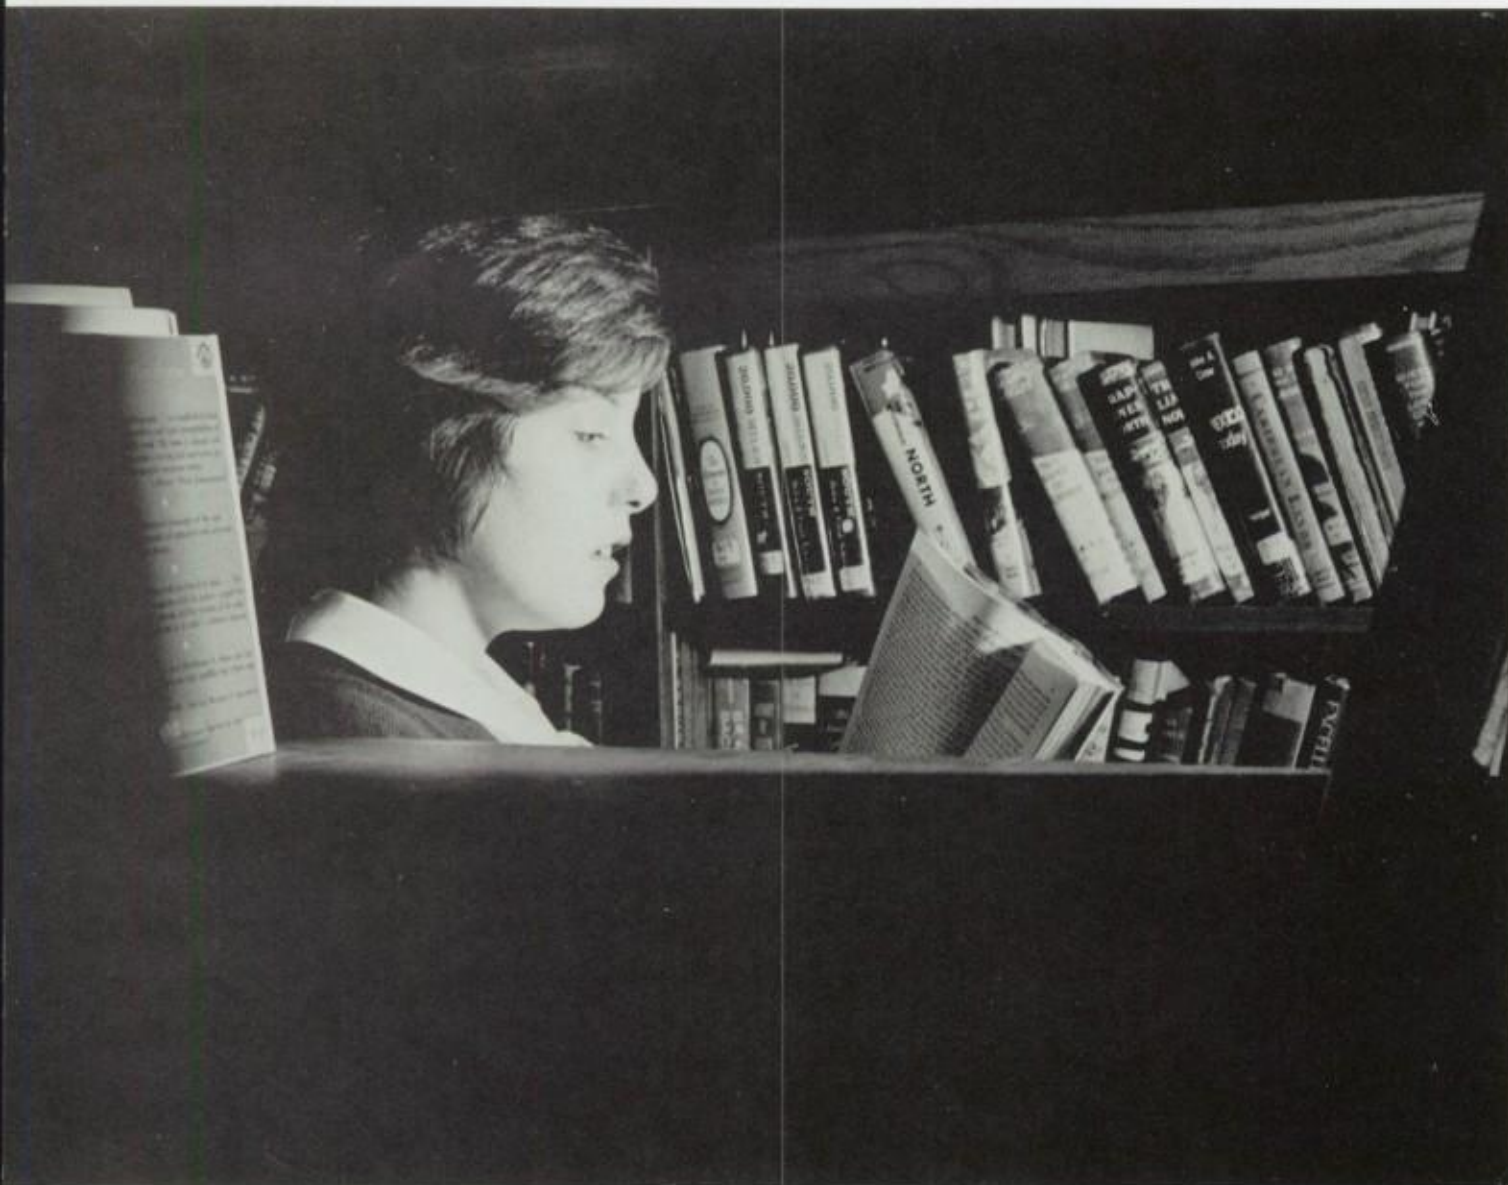

People tend to look into the future, hoping to fulfill their hopes and their dreams. To those of us in high school, we look forward to graduation. However, as graduation nears, we find ourselves dreaming new dreams and hoping for success in fulfilling those dreams. Sometimes we fail, yet we are always able to overcome our failures and look forward to a new day. We find strength in our realization that there will always be the dawn of a new day.

SENIORS

Seniors spend much time reflecting the past and anticipating the future. They see themselves as individuals greatly changed by the challenges which have confronted them the past four years. For them, the future offers a much broader spectrum of opportunities for learning and growth. In retrospect, they realize that high school, with its moments of elation and disappointment, has prepared them for future endeavors. For each success and each failure to come, there will continue to be a new day to follow.

As graduation approached for the class of 1975, many of us began to wonder what we had gained during our high school years. Some of us gained knowledge in classes while others of us began to worry that we had not worked diligently enough to prepare ourselves for the years which lay beyond high school. Despite all we may or may not have learned within the classroom, the class of 1975 learned to work together in order to accept and create change.

Steve Schad, president; Mike Montgomery, vice-president; Bev McWhorter, treasurer; Joan Tepe, secretary.

The class of 1975 were typical powerless freshmen; we could do little but tolerate the authority held by upperclassmen. We had to accept sitting passively in homeroom while the upperclassmen enjoyed assemblies. While the rest of the school roamed the halls during their unscheduled time, we, as lowly freshmen, were herded into study halls. We survived with the hope that the following year in the newly completed building would offer improved conditions. However, even as sophomores we remained the youngest class in the school. Nevertheless, we were determined to do something new and different for which we would be recognized by the upperclassmen. The Bengals vs. faculty basketball game which we instituted was a success and may become a tradition for all sophomore classes. Our changes were beginning.

During our junior year, we began to feel more important as we received our rings and gave advice to the innocent sophomores. Our greatest accomplishment as juniors was to have floats in the homecoming parade, a change which promises to become a homecoming tradition.

As seniors, we finally emerged from the shadow of the classes before us. For our senior class play, we chose Auntie Mame. No other class had ever attempted so difficult a play with so large a cast. With the football team second in the city and senior night approaching, the seniors in Student Council proposed a Spirit Week and bonfire, events the administration had never before approved. We finally gained approval, and the success of Spirit Week may make this activity another annual event created by our class.

Yes, the class of 1975 has witnessed many changes while creating others that will long be associated with our class. We leave knowing that as Norwood High School has changed us, we have also changed Norwood High School.

We've got the mighty, mighty Seniors on our side.

Jim and Joe find that dedication in football can sometimes lead to injuries.

Watch out! Here comes Mrs. Warfield.

Students discuss their choices for the Homecoming Queen.

Burning the dummy highlighted the bonfire.

Who says Norwood isn't backward?

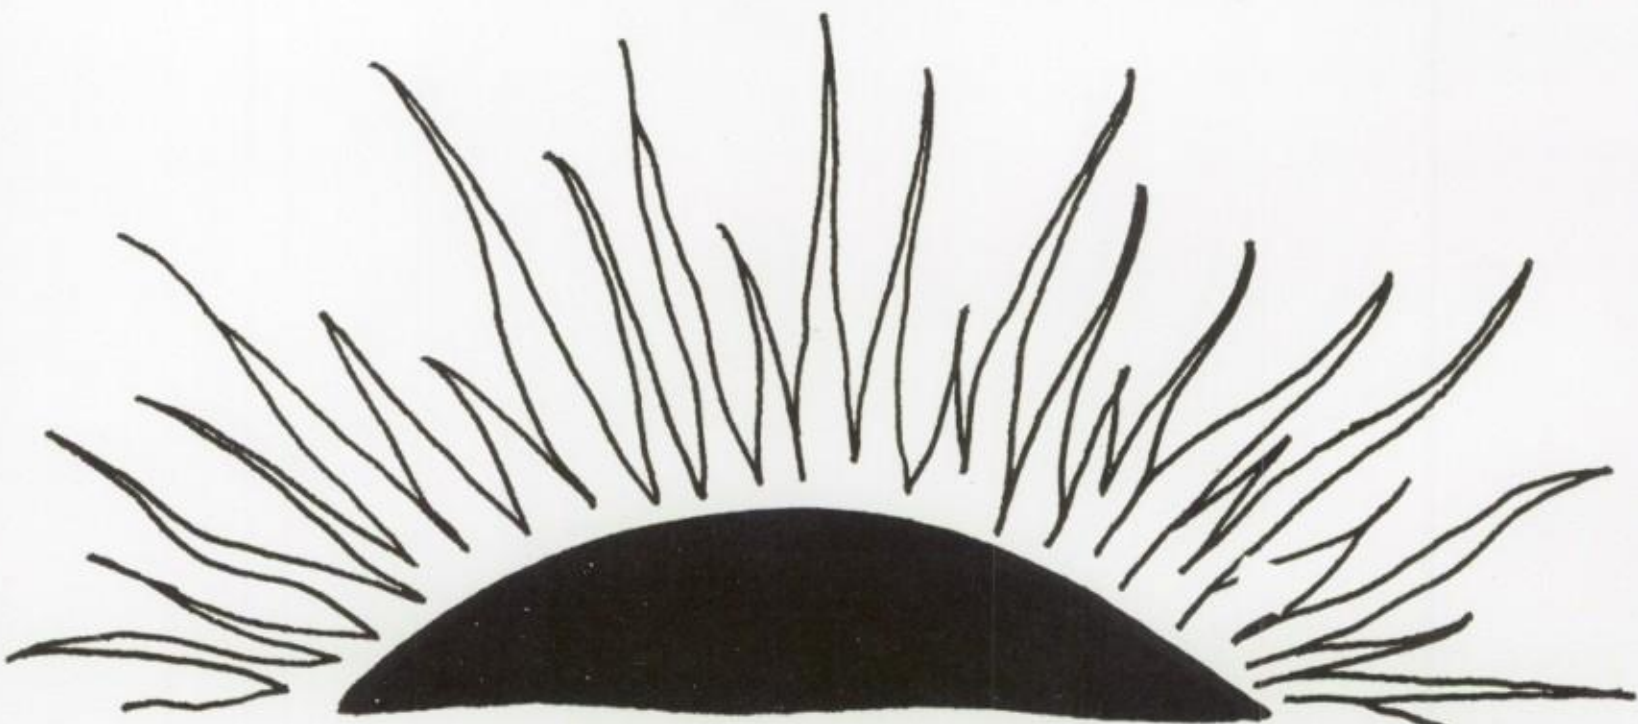

"Is it that bad, Charlotte?"

Seniors have many talents!

"I think I better start eating my spinach."

ACADEMICS

REVIEWS

High school exists as an institution which facilitates learning. Faculty members, using the books and equipment provided, still remain mere tools in the education of students. At the very most, teachers can only hope to supply their students with a desire to learn. Any learning must come from the individual effort of each student himself.

Co-ops prepare to leave for a half day of work.

Working together plays a vital part in a student's academic life.

Students display their dramatic talents as they perform in English class.

Decisions! Decisions!

A student demonstrates how to do a "spin-around."

Pam Barker, Mrs. Buchy, and Vonda Trammell devote much of their time to the Senior Class Play.

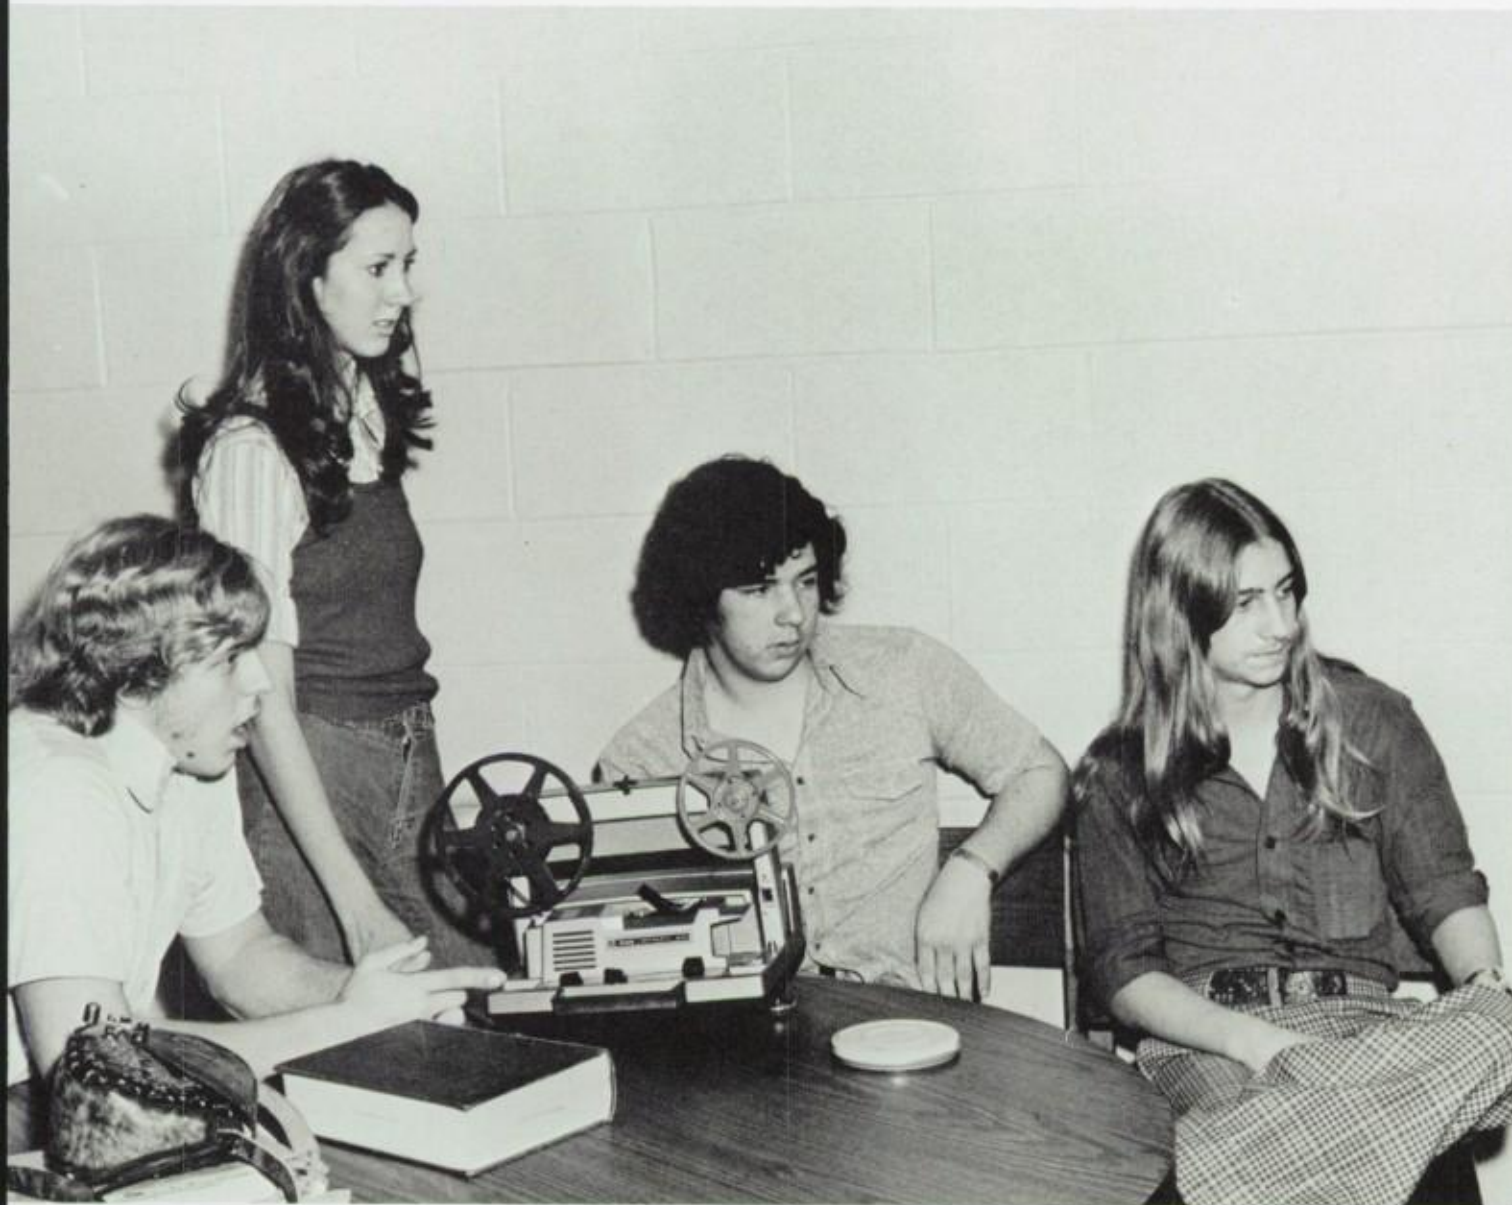

Joe Keller, an eager participant, co-ops in the media center.

Mr. Ganger prepares to use silk-screen.

Exams can be tiring!!

Just one final look before presenting that media project.

Paul and Joe appear to be quite busy working the computer.

Hey girls! Look out!

Office workers have many opportunities to practice skills.

French II students study this cylindrical object to find out what's happening in France.

Spanish Club members celebrate Christmas with the breaking open of the piñata.

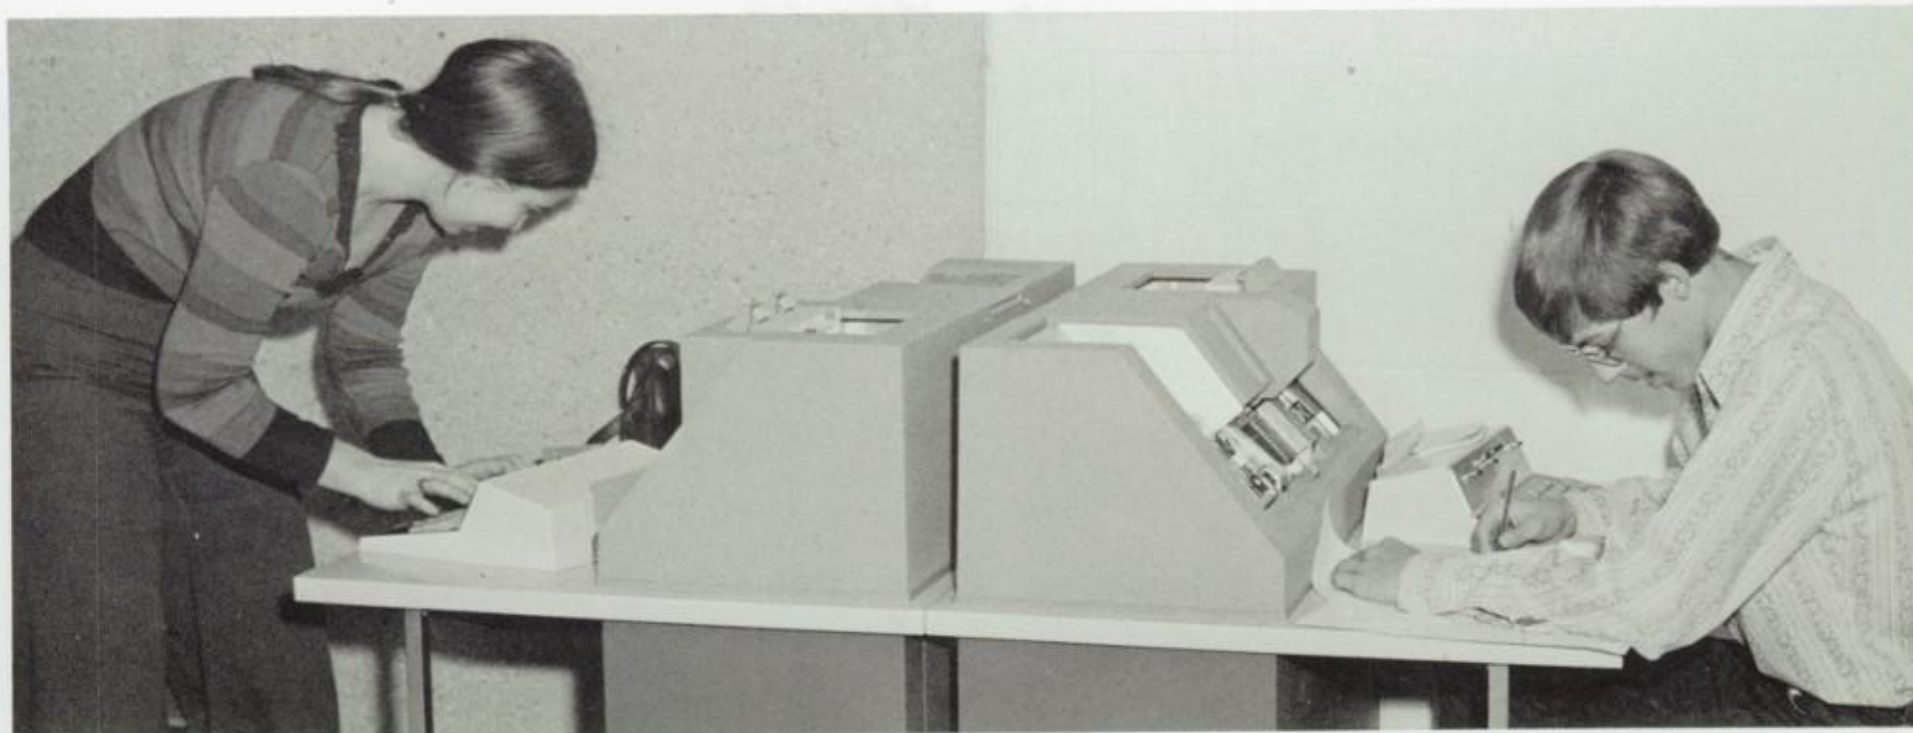

Debbie helps Rodney with his geography.

Everybody needs a little help now and then.

Students may work alone or together in the library.

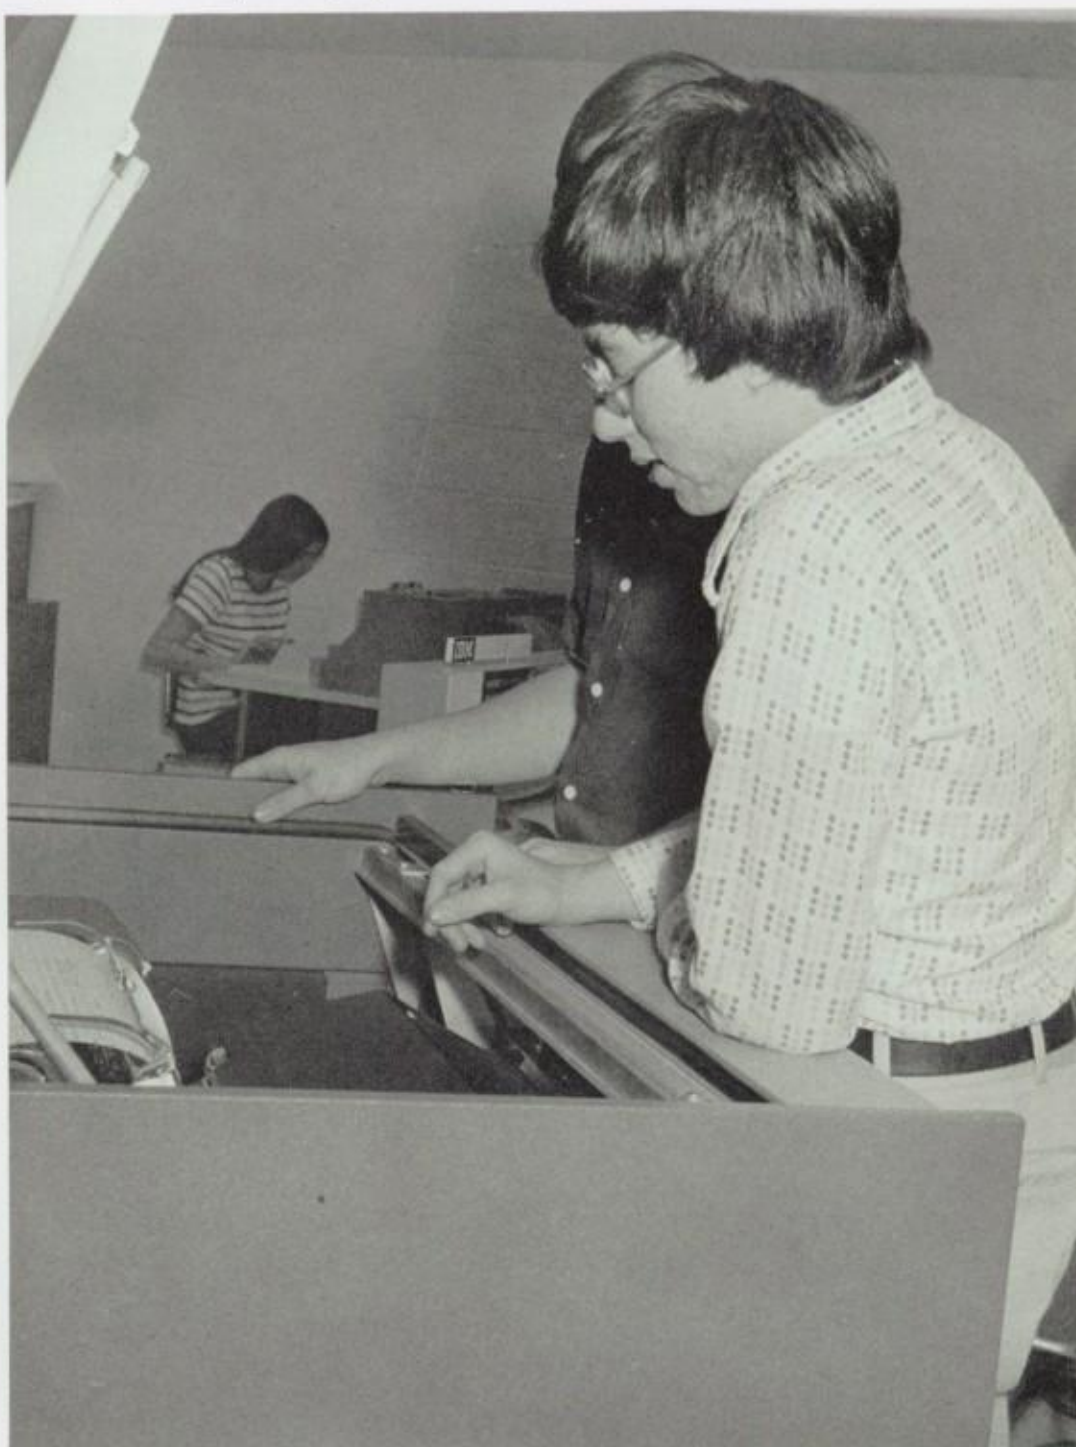

Using the computer obviously requires concentration.

Students enjoy their lunch together.

Clyde Rayburn hopes his program will execute successfully.

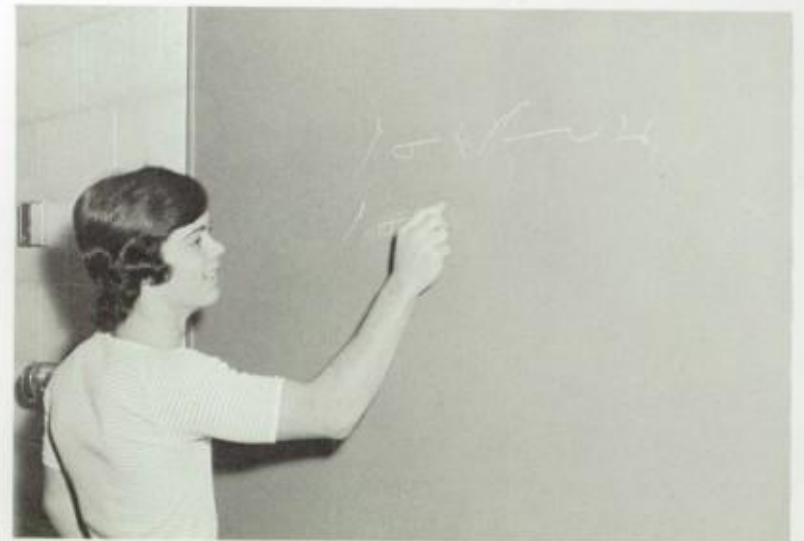

A prospective secretary needs shorthand.

These boys discover that they can study and relax in the library.

Mr. Prop explains some of the equipment necessary in his class.

Gil Murphy practices his shorthand skill.

Lunchtime can be a time for fun and planning.

Practice is a vital asset to a good show.

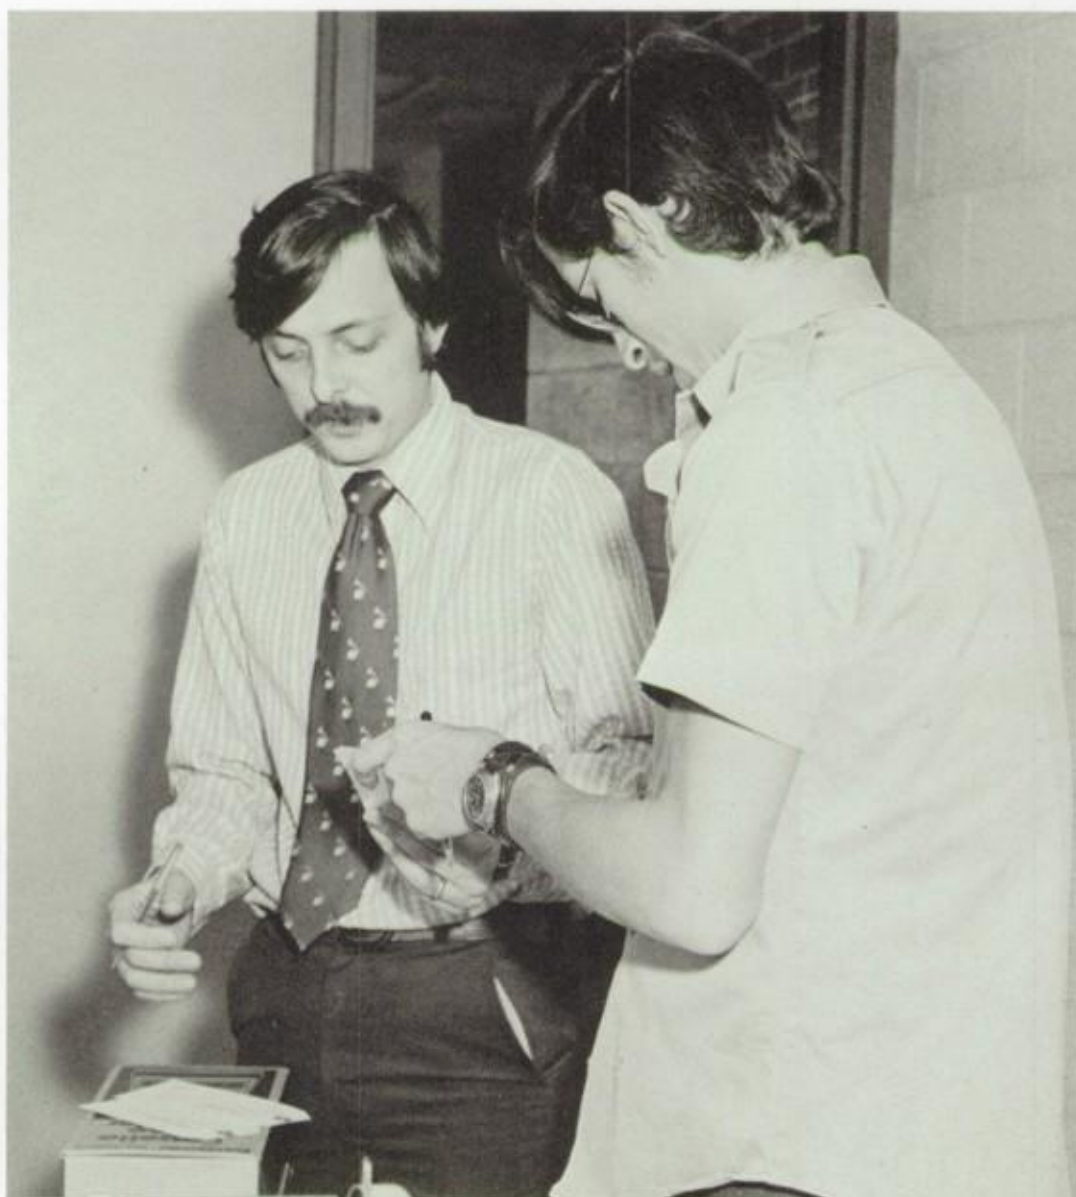

Students take time out for a break from that enchanting lecture.

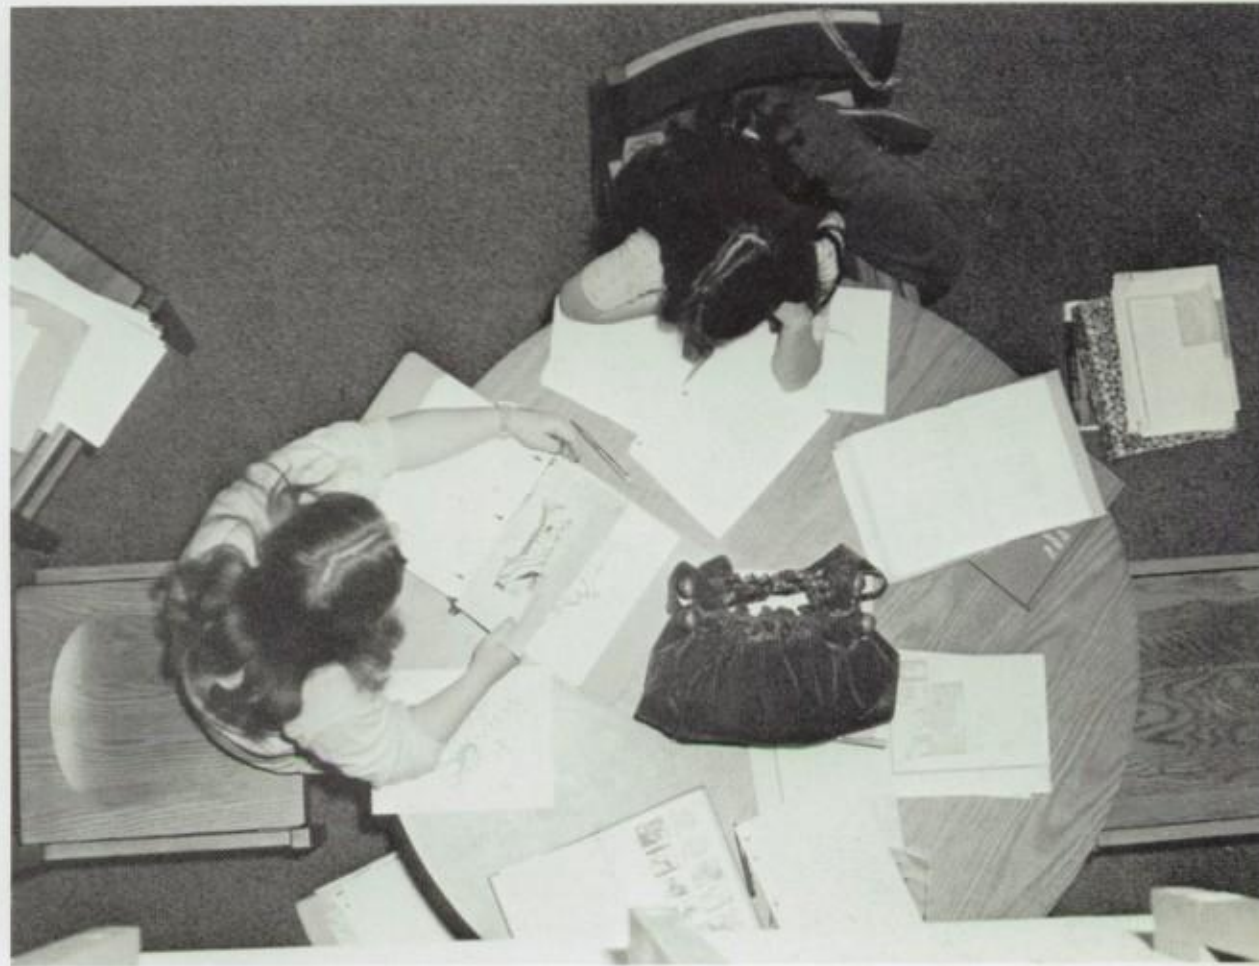

Students appear to enjoy this chemistry experiment

Mr. Maud assists a student in the media center.

Mr. Hoover looks on impatiently as students complete work.

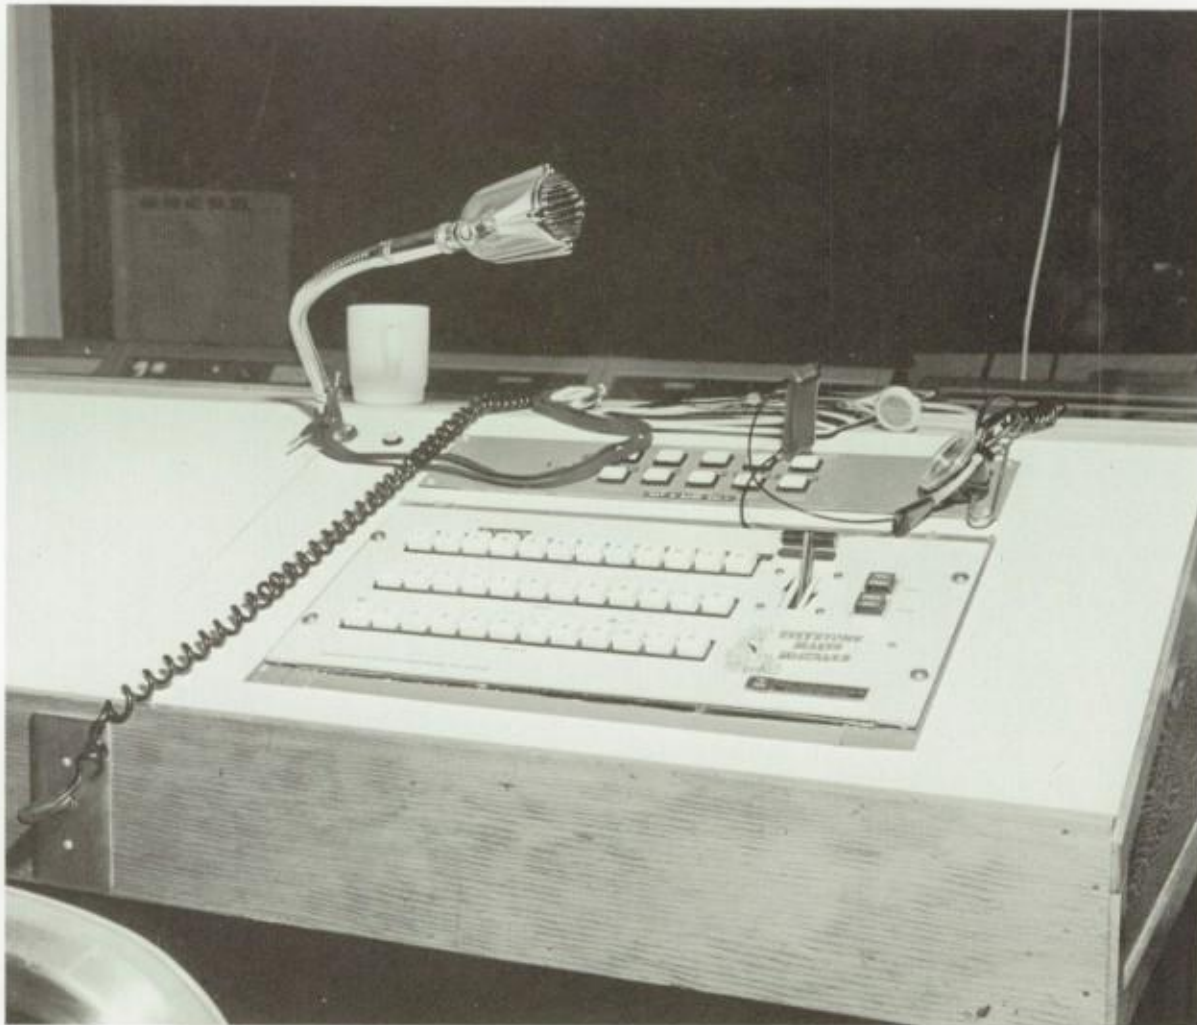

Studying together is much more interesting.

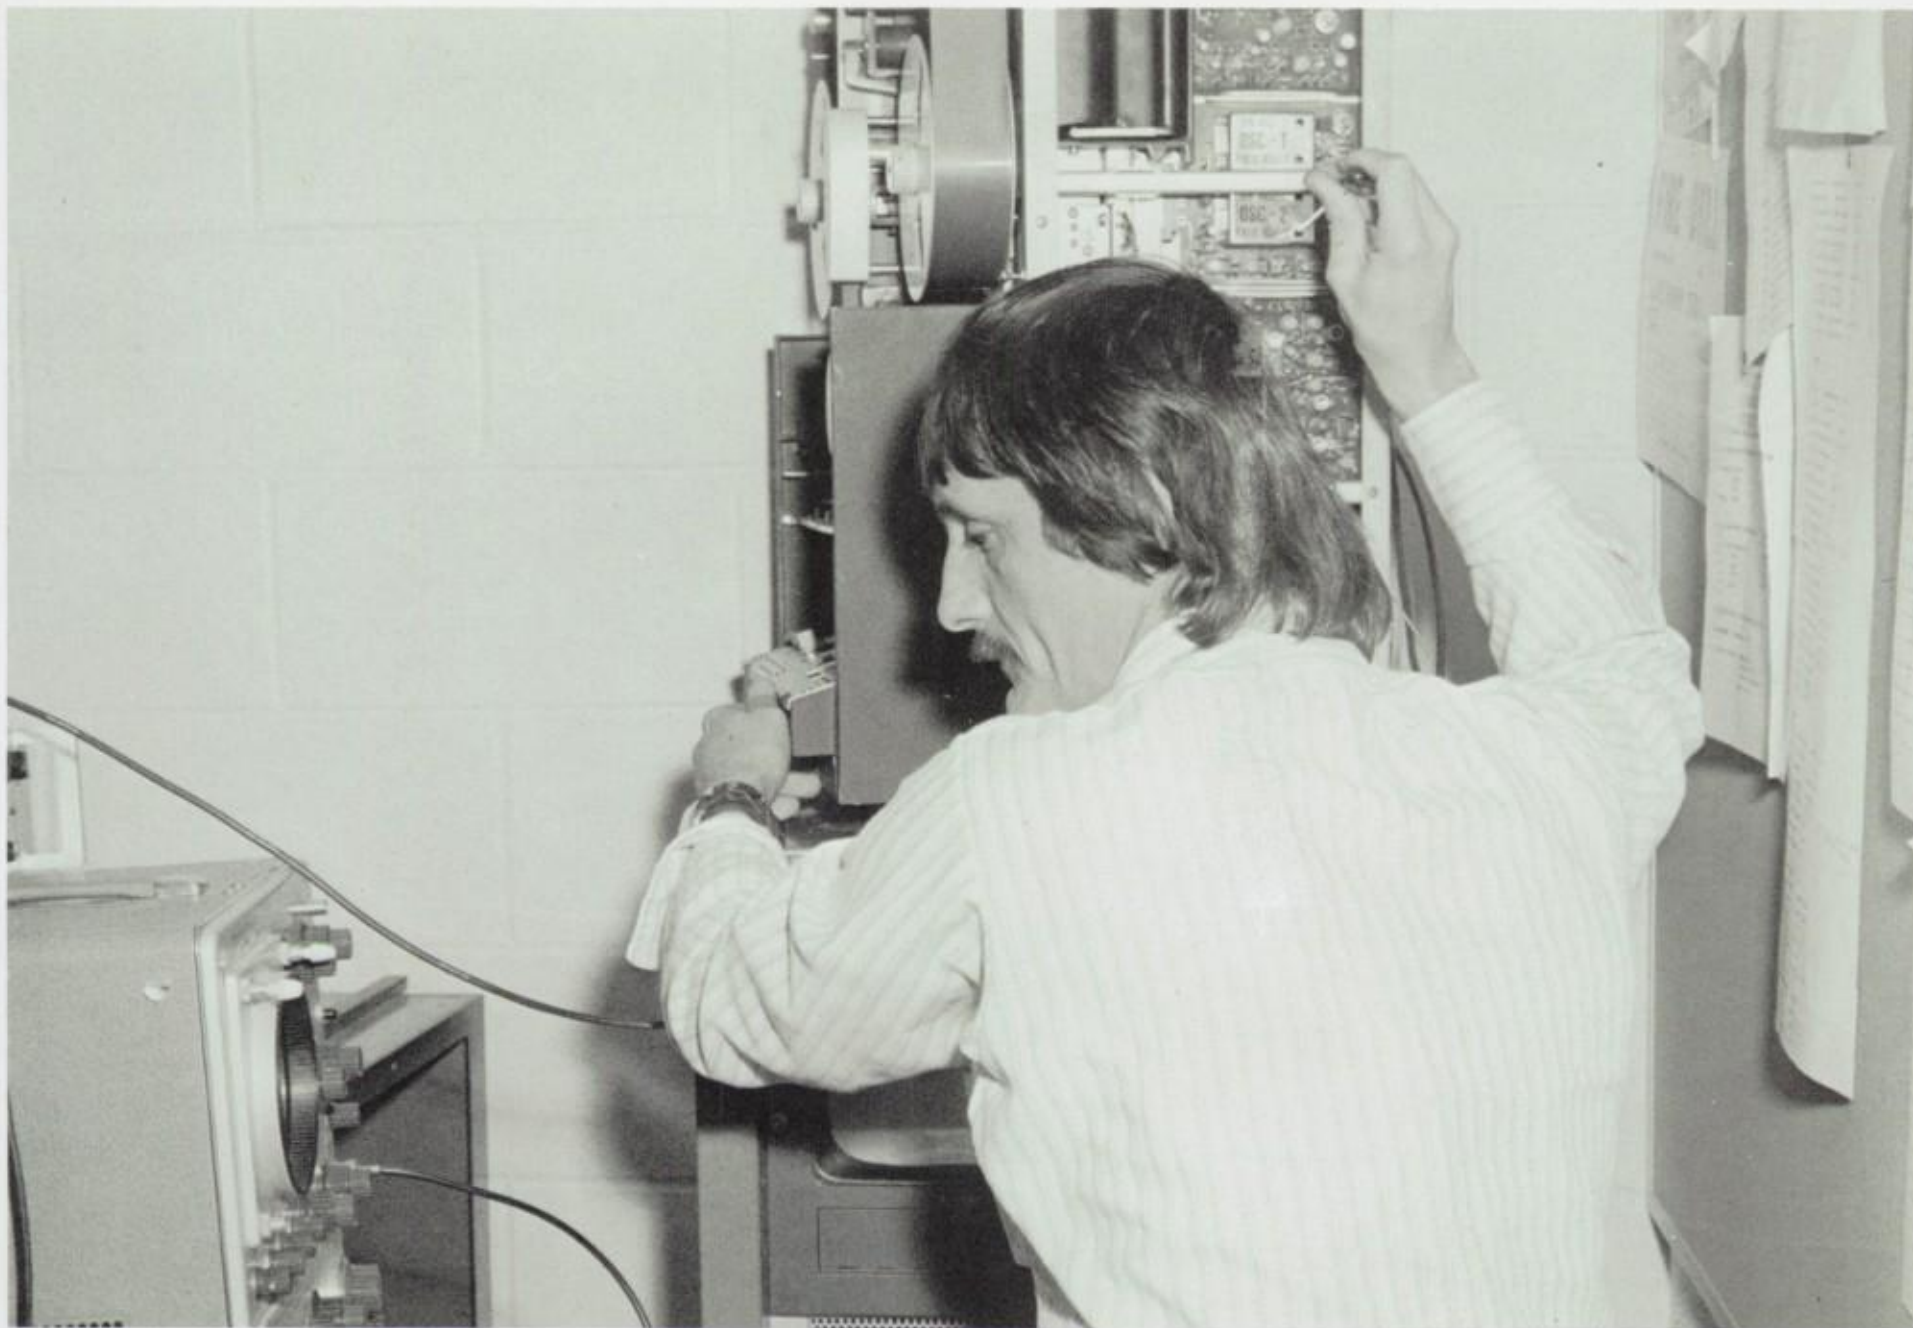

Group work can be an exciting as well as informative.

The switcher is ready for use.

A college student gains experience by working in the control room of the TV studio.

Mr. Noakes must occasionally adjust equipment in the T.V. studio.

The show is about to start.

FEATURES

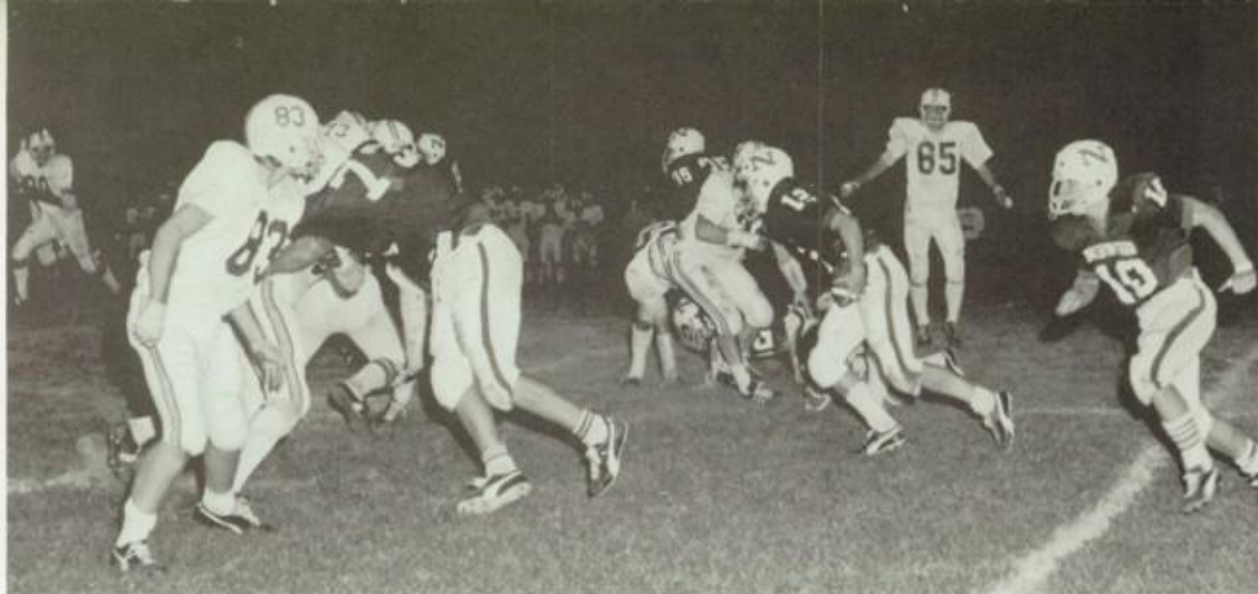

Special school-sponsored events, such as dances, plays, and concerts, provide students with the opportunity to socialize with one another. More importantly, these occasions put the spotlight on the exceptional students: actors, musicians, and Homecoming and Prom queens. The talents and diligent efforts on the part of these students earn them the praise and respect of their fellow students.

FALL EVENTS

Good block!! Take it away, Mike!

Campaigning affords the opportunity to introduce new people and new ideas to the Class of '75.

Rehearsals offer many pleasant memories in addition to the hard work involved in memorizing lines and blocking movements.

The Homecoming Dance is one of the special events in the lives of high school students.

Little Patrick needs an explanation from Auntie Mame.

Auntie Mame did survive that HUNT!

HOMECOMING ACTIVITIES

The Indians charge onto the field to beat Northwest.

Bobbi Whitaker is announced Homecoming Queen.

Students "ham it up" for the photographer at the dance.

Juniors find that the year is filled with many decisions. They are responsible for sponsoring the main social events, for which they worked diligently during their sophomore year. To them, the senior class will be just another unnecessary evil until they take over the position themselves. They eagerly await the day in which they will find themselves the leaders of the school.

CLUBS

The simplest and, perhaps, the best-learned lessons come about through a student's relationships with other students. Clubs are a means through which students of similar interests can work and learn together. Students involved in an extra-curricular organization are soon made aware of the need of workers as well as leaders. They experience the sense of accomplishment and pride as their group completes various projects. Hence, a student develops many values and ideals which will remain with him long after his high school years.

SOPHOMORES ALWAYS

Sophomores come into high school perhaps confused at first, but they fall into the new surroundings without much difficulty. The many new clubs and organizations become familiar rapidly as the sophomore student involves himself with their activities. For the sophomores, the future holds one dream: becoming upperclassmen. In the meantime, they must endure the tortures that come with being the youngest students in the school.

Mary Lou Romanello, president; Nancy Morgan, vice-president; Michelle Hughes, secretary; Jeff Hart, treasurer.

Sporting events teach students to strive for a common goal instead of self-glorification. Participants discover that a victory cannot be won until team work is in the hearts of all of those involved. Good sportsmanship is a must for both spectators and team members, even if it means bearing a difficult defeat.

FACULTY

The graphic features a stylized sun with a solid black semi-circular base and numerous thin, curved lines radiating upwards. Below the sun, the word "FACULTY" is written in large, bold, outlined capital letters. The lower portion of these letters is filled with a vertical wood-grain texture, giving them a three-dimensional appearance.

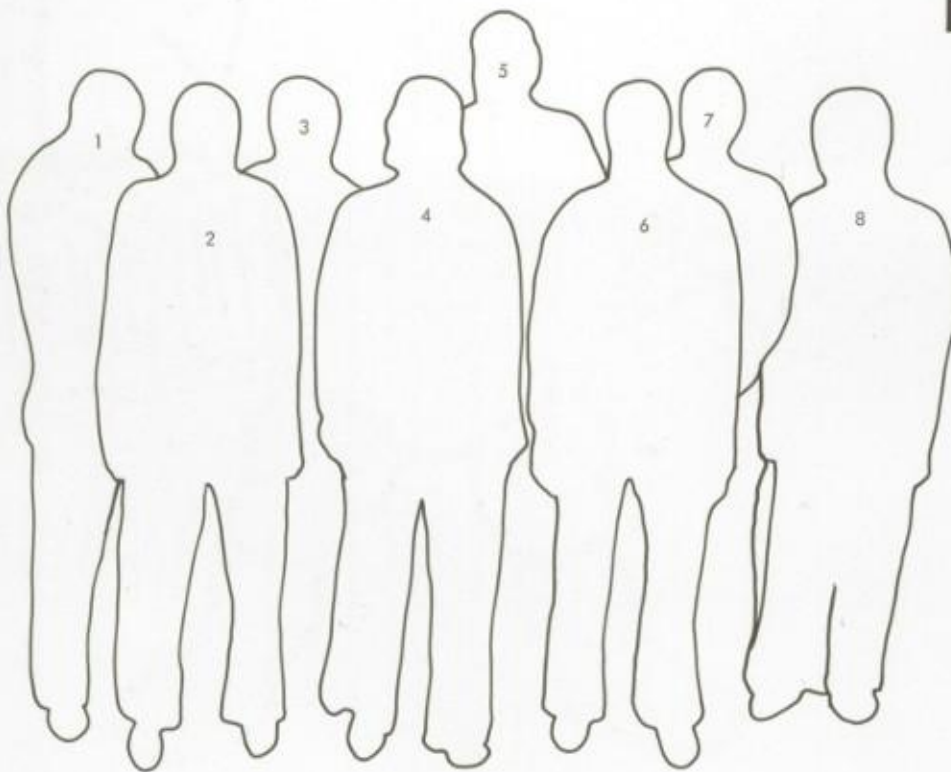

The faculty at Norwood High School is composed of many very intelligent individuals who have dedicated their lives to the teaching of others. For some of them, this dedication goes even further than the classroom. They are found coaching sporting events, sponsoring clubs and organizations, chaperoning dances, and even participating in money-making projects. For each member of the faculty, each day carries a new experience.

The many different businesses in Norwood play a large part in making the publication of the Silhouette possible each year. Without their purchases of advertisements in our yearbook, the staff would not have enough money to even produce an annual for the student body. We ask that the students of Norwood patronize these businesses so that they will find their ad purchases worthwhile and will continue to support our Silhouette.

An end or a beginning?

There was a time when a high school diploma could be considered an end — sufficient education for the job ahead. But no more. Not in these days of ever-advancing technology and intense individual competition. Now, whether you're planning on a white-collar or blue-collar job, the requirements are much the same — more knowledge, more skills, more education. And that means study beyond high school.

The decision is yours. Make it carefully, for it will probably be the most important one you'll ever make. We at Allis-Chalmers hope it will be for further study. Deeply involved in space-age technology ourselves, we know first-hand the crucial importance of special skills and education. Just as you will, in the future—when it counts.

When we acquired the task of editing a yearbook, we reacted calmly. However, as the book developed, we realized that NOBODY can understand what a job it is until confronted with it. This year, just as all others, we ran into problems; some of them were major disasters. The deadlines came too quickly, and the pictures came too slowly.

During the summer, we planned what we wanted without considering practicalities. We found that we had to abandon many of these great ideas, and do things quickly in order to meet those wretched deadlines. When our first deadline rolled around, we panicked. We suddenly found everything to do and only a small amount of time in which to do it. We found out quickly that our theme related quite well to our task: we spent many long hours at school, and a few times, we almost saw the "dawn of a new day." Our teachers were very patient with us through those trying times.

When we finally survived that first deadline, we came to our senses and decided that we couldn't do the book alone — we needed HELP! So we sought help from the high officials, who brought the rest of our staff to our rescue. We appreciate so much the help they contributed. Thanks to everyone who helped make this book possible.

As the years pass, we hope that this book will be a treasure in your life. We have done our best to make this book the best book for the class of 1975.
